Marvin T. Miller, has always believed that the Deaf community has a lot to offer the world. He wants to build the world's first fully integrated Sign Language town populated by a variety of bilingual people who use ASL on a daily basis.

Marvin currently teaches Deafhood 101 and 201 in Indiana and other states. Marvin served as President of Indiana Association of the Deaf (IAD). He is a graduate of the Model Secondary School for the Deaf, attended Gallaudet University for two years and he has been involved with student politics and newspapers. Marvin lives in Washington, DC and he's currently a undergraduate student majoring in Deaf Studies at Gallaudet University. His children are currently attending Indiana School for the Deaf where Marvin's grandmother graduated from in 1945.
